

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An apparatus for and method of improving the efficiency of service request/response activity between multiple clients and multiple service applications within a complex environment. The key to the technique is the use of separate, independent thread pools to maintain I/O and computational activity. A common client key is utilized with both thread pools for a given client service request to ensure the needed coordination.